Budgets are spending limits, not guaranteed spend. The projections are Google simulations and are not promises of future results. Actual performance can vary with demand, competition, conversion tracking, and auction conditions.

Decision framework

OPTION	WHEN IT FITS	CONTROL
Approve Google's recommendation	When the business can accept a higher CPA in exchange for more lead volume.	Move to $17/day and review after 14 days.
Run a controlled test	When management wants evidence before committing to the full increase.	Test $13/day for 14 days, then compare conversion volume and CPA.
Keep current budget	When protecting efficiency and cash flow matters more than incremental volume.	Remain at $9.50/day; no account change required.

Recommended management approach: Treat Google's $17/day figure as a growth proposal, not an automatic optimization. If added lead capacity can be handled operationally, approve a time-boxed test with a pre-set CPA review threshold. Otherwise, keep the current $9.50/day budget.

Suggested test guardrails

Test length	14 days after the budget change, with no additional bidding changes during the test.
Spend ceiling	$17.00 per day for the active campaign; do not apply the recommendation to the paused campaign.
Efficiency checkpoint	Review if cost per conversion materially exceeds about $8.02, the current $6.57 CPA plus Google's projected 22% increase.
Volume checkpoint	Confirm the shop can answer and service the additional calls and lead forms generated by the campaign.
